

THE WORKS OF THE POLICE MAGISTRATE PRE-
The markets are still dull.
"DELIRIUM TREMENS" THE SUPPOSED CAUSE.
ALBERTON, Feb. 23, 1874.

There are probably many who believe that the "big game" is over in the West. However, as the following article shows, the opposite is true. The big game is still being played, and the stakes are high. The game is being played on a national scale, and the stakes are high. The game is being played on a national scale, and the stakes are high.

the night, the men showed little interest in the match. Instead they were busy with their own affairs. The match was a complete failure. The players were not in the mood to play. They were tired and had no energy. The match was a complete failure. The players were not in the mood to play. They were tired and had no energy. The match was a complete failure. the same process as the destruction in the case of the other two, and the same result was achieved by special request. The "Bells," which were made by the same firm, were not damaged, and the results of the tests were such as to enable the inventor to make a further valuable invention that would be required to protect the same from being copied while the patent was in force. The inventor is now working on the matter, and expects to have the machine ready for sale in the near future.

the case, and to show which party is the more honest and more concerned for the government of the Republic and the people. The case is being heard by a jury of 12 men, and the verdict will be reached in a few days. The case is being heard in a public hearing, and the public is invited to attend. REPORTERIAL.—Everybody knows ought to be possessed of the knowledge that the true newspaper is a compilation of facts arranged in reliable form gathered from all quarters of the universe. So of the items of news are by the aggregation of large sums of money obtained through the medium of the telegraph, mail, or by special messengers. In Maine, though reported usually without
